The late George William Curtis was a great admirer of Henry D. Thoreau, and once said of him: "Thoreau's life was in the observation and suggestion of nature, and of these his books are the record. There is no such comprehensive observation as his recorded in literature. His style is as true as a compass, so incisive and so pictorial."

Advices from Tashkent, a town of Asiatic Russia, in Syr Darya, are to the effect that the cholera in the Asiatic quarter of the town, which the mob attacked during the Jewish riots, was attacked and stabbed by a police officer while sitting in a cafe. The officer made a desperate attempt to take the life of the chief, and when he succeeded he committed suicide on the spot.

The disastrous results felt in the price of silver on the financial position of India is shown in the estimate made public by Mr. Harboure, the finance secretary of the Indian government. This shows a probable deficiency of from $6,000 to $10,000 of rupees in the next budget. Mr. Harboure opposes meeting the deficit by the issue of a loan and advises the curtailment of the military expenditures.

Gen. Lombard is taking so much care to verify the facts and figures of which he will make use in his forthcoming history of the rebellion that the book ought to have the authority of accuracy which is lacking in most popular histories. He expects to publish the three months of October, November and December next on the old battle fields of Virginia comparing his maps with the existing landmarks and correcting inaccuracies.

A man is wise when he finds that home is where his friends live. One can exist elsewhere but can never truly be at home. Max O'Rell, who is lecturing in Australia, announces his intention of returning home and "settling down" for life after this last trip. Asked whether by home he meant Paris he replied in the negative. "In Paris everything is changed. We go there every year to look around, but when one has formed a circle of literary, social and artistic friends, as I have in London, well, that is home."

Secretary Rusk Announces That Pneumonia Has Been Conquered in This Country.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Secretary Rusk issued the following declaration, the most important of all that have come from the department agricultural during his administration: "To Whom It May Concern: Notwithstanding the fact that the quarantine heretofore existing in the counties of King and Queens, state of New York, and the county of Essex, state of New Jersey, for the suppression of contagious pneumonia among cattle is this day removed."

The removal of the aforesaid quarantine completes the dissolving of all quarantines established by this department in the several sections of the United States for the suppression of the above named disease. No case of this disease has occurred in the state of Illinois, since December 25, 1891, a period of more than four years and eight months. No case has occurred in the state of Pennsylvania, since September 1891, a period of more than four years and a few days. No case has occurred in the state of New York, since September 1891, a period of more than four years and four months. No case has occurred in the state of New Jersey, since March 25, 1892, a period of more than two years. I do hereby officially announce that the disease known as contagious pneumonia among cattle is this day removed."

The Western Associated press received this message at 10 o'clock: Cholera has again broken out on board the Bohemia. There are two new cases reported. The last case died at 10 o'clock. The Bohemia still has her average passengers on board, though her cabin people are all out. Dr. Jenkins was down the bay on board the Patrol with Superintendent Hyman and Inspector Williams. He has just returned and says that if yesterday had not been so stormy the passengers would have been out of the Bohemia.
